ROYAL WEDDING
BRILLIANT EVENT

Houses of Fife and Connaught Are United By Marriage of Duchess Alexandra and Prince Arthur.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—In the presence of two reigning kings, George of England, and Haakon of Norway, and their queens, as well as many other notables, including members of royal families, diplomats and officers of state, Alexandra, duchess of Fife, was married to Prince Arthur of Connaught, in the chapel Royal of St. James palace at noon Wednesday.

The event, which was the first royal wedding in England since 1905, when Princess Margaret of Connaught became the bride of the crown prince of Sweden, was gorgeous in every respect.

The chapel was a bower of flowers. Palms, roses and lilies hid the walls and surrounded the altar.

The scene was one full of color with the brilliant uniforms and the masses of flowers.

King George gave away the bride. After the benediction the bridal party adjourned to the throne room where a reception was held. The register was signed by the bride's mother, the witnesses being King George, Queen Mary, the Duke of Connaught and several other members of the royal family.

The gifts were magnificent, being worth nearly $750,000. In keeping with the other imperial appointments of the event was the bride's trousseau. It contains fifty-five gowns of various kinds.

The weather was fair. Enormous crowds began gathering in the streets near the palace long before the hour set for the wedding, hoping to get a glimpse of the bride and bridegroom and some of the notable persons attending. All the buildings in the vicinity were decorated with flags. Many persons in the crowd wore miniature Union Jacks.

Shortly before noon the guests began arriving in force. Among the early arrivals was Queen Mother Alexandra. Premier Asquith, attended by a body guard to prevent a personal attack by suffragets, came soon afterward.

In the meantime members of the cabinet and the foreign ambassadors were arriving in carriages and automobiles.

King and Queen Arrive.

King George and Queen Mary were carried in a state carriage from Buckingham palace. Immediately upon their arrival they were met by King Haakon, of Norway, the queen of Norway, the Prince of Wales, Prince Leopold of Battenburg, Prince Andrew of Greece, and others.

The suites retired to the throne room awaiting the arrival of the bride. When the bride arrived she was accompanied by her mother and the princess royal. Her wedding gown was of white charmeuse, draped with tulle and richly embroidered with pearls. The train was composed of the same charmeuse hanging from the shoulders and draped with beautiful old Brussels applique lace. A Brussels lace veil matched the gown.

The marriage ritual of the Church of England was used, the ceremony being performed by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishop of London, dean of the chapel Royal, and canon Shepard, sub dean.

The old-fashioned ceremony was used, the bride promising to "love, cherish and obey" her husband.

The route from the grand staircase of the palace to the chapel was lined with non-commissioned officers and men of Prince Arthur's regiment, the Scots Greys.

The bridesmaids were Princess Mary, daughter of King George; Princess Maud, sister of the bride; Princess Helena and Princess Victoria of Teck, daughters of the Duke of Teck, and Princess May, daughter of Prince Alexander of Teck.

The women guests at the ceremony were in full evening dress without trains and wore no veils.
